Agenda

It's no secret that today's world is faced with a variety of security challenges: terrorism, school violence, random shootings, and cyber issues, to name just a few. As a planet, as a nation, as a town, and as a community, how are we managing these complex set of threats? In this conference, we'll be looking at how the Town of Westford is confronting these issues from the departmental perspectives of DPW, Public Safety, School, Information Technology, and Management.

We are pleased to present keynote speaker Juliette Kayyem, the former Assistant Secretary for Intergovernmental Affairs in the United States Department of Homeland Security. Prior to her federal post, Ms. Kayyem served as Massachusetts' first Undersecretary for Homeland Security. She is also the host of the WGBH podcast Security Mom, and a national security analyst for CNN.

From the Homeland to the Hometown:
Addressing Security in an Age of Mayhem.

As public safety officials, there's one question we're constantly being asked: Are we Safe? The answer, as we all know, is more complicated than a simple yes or no. Nevertheless, there are steps we can take as leaders and citizens to prepare our communities to face a world of seemingly ever-growing threats. Former Assistant Secretary of Homeland Security Juliette Kayyem will draw on her career managing risk and disaster to share the changing landscape of homeland security and talk about how we can build a more resilient nation - starting in our own neighborhoods.

10:15 am-11:00 am

Presenters: Police Chief Scott Nix, Town of Sudbury, and Police Chief John Moore, Town of Holliston
Chief Nix and Chief Moore will look at the daily security challenges in today's municipal landscape.
