It's no secret that our nation is in the midst of an opioid epidemic. Statistics say that 115 Americans die of an overdose every day. This startling reality has consequences for the workplace. In fact, research says that 75% of those who have an addiction are employed. Whether it's one's own use, a family member's, or a co-worker's, substance use impinges on productivity, focus, and job satisfaction. This webinar will present information on addiction, warning signs & symptoms, denial, enabling, and co-dependency, as well as much needed resource information. The first step towards combatting a crisis is raising awareness. Join us as we explore what you can do to help combat the opioid epidemic in the workplace and your community.
