

What Can You Do to Combat the Opioid Crisis at Work?

The Opioid Crisis Webinar (Part 1): What Managers Need To Know

Thursday, November 15, 2018

2:00 – 3:00 pm

We are in the midst of an opioid epidemic; 115 Americans die of an overdose every day. The epidemic is being increasingly felt at work, because 75% of those addicted are employed. This impacts your workers' productivity and moral, your health care costs, and most importantly, the lives and wellbeing of your employees.

Register today for The Opioid Crisis Webinar \(Part 1\): What Managers Need to Know

During this webinar, learn what your responsibilities are around identifying employees who may be at risk, the addiction danger signs and available recovery resources. Particular attention will be paid to how managers can support employees who may be exhibiting signs and symptoms of addiction. You may feel unsure about whether or how to intervene with an employee. This session will illuminate the best steps to take. Help halt the opioid epidemic in your workplace and community.

The Opioid Crisis Webinar (Part 2): What Employees Need to Know

Save the date (January 31, 2019 from 2:00 -- 3:00 pm) for the second part of our series. We will provide employees with information to help them stay safe, productive and support others. They will learn: What are the signs of opioid use? How does addiction itself work? What's the impact on one's family? Particular attention will be paid to destigmatizing addiction itself. You will receive an email in December with registration information for this webinar.

On-site Trainings

To schedule training about these topics at your workplace, please contact Michele Grant at 508-650-6829 or Michele.grant@allonehealth.com. The first step towards any change is awareness. Learn how to help your employees.